Kettle Moraine Tour

Four cars drove from Milwaukee to Erin to see Holy Hill. The group from the south agreed to meet me at Krogers, and low and behold we arrived at the same time. Like to try that again.

We then headed north amid corn fields and soybean fields through the rolling countryside west of Milwaukee. Wisconsin has what are called 'Rustic Roads' which are meant to be driven slowly so you can enjoy the scenery as you drive by. We arrived at a location marked with a sign that states Spectacular Sculpture. I have seen these signs where I live and a friend finally took me there. Wow, I think it is pretty cool. A man and his wife have created a few sculptures and placed them among his property. You can drive in his driveway in a loop, or you can park wherever you like and walk through the display.

A fifth car joined us at this location. Then we proceeded onward. Now the drive got a bit tougher. We were driving through the part of WI where the glaciers deposited part of their loads. It created what is known
